Introduction: How to Use This Booklet

School counselors and school psychologists in Spartanburg District Seven compiled this resource booklet. It is not intended to be a comprehensive list, but rather, one that is user friendly and reasonably reliable as far as quality of service. To maximize the utility of this booklet, please consider the following factors before using this booklet with students, families, and fellow staff members. Direct referrals can only be made to state agencies, such as Lexington County Mental Health or Federal agencies, such as Tricare and only in consultation with the parent or guardian.

Be ethical. It is considered ethical practice to give at least three referrals for a given situation. This precaution is to prevent schools from appearing to be solicitous or “being in on the take” in their referrals. The more referrals you can give, the less likely you will appear to be routing a student to a specific source for your own financial or unprofessional gain. If you give three referrals, no more than one should be a person who works in the school district. Also, it is considered unethical to refer to a person who works in the schools of the student’s attendance zone. This measure is to prevent a referral source from having a dual relationship or conflict of interest.

Use discretion. Resources fit the following criteria:

- a. The person or agency has demonstrated successful work with children or their families.
- b. The person or agency would initiate contact and coordinate care with school staff.
- c. The person or agency use professional and noncontroversial methods of treatment, with no known negative reputation.

This criterion was used for sections II and IV. You can assume that regarding the mental health agencies and support services, as well private therapists, someone has used them, and they had a good experience. With the other sections, however, you should be much more modest about how good the service will be. Again, be specific about what you know and don’t know about your referrals.

Don’t make promises. We have compiled a list of resources with good past experiences. Things can change: Agencies abruptly stop certain services. Therapists go through bad spells or suddenly move out of town. Don’t promise success (or failures) of any referral. The bottom line is that no one can predict whether or not a given intervention will be successful.

Be a smart shopper. Encourage the student or parent to be a good consumer. If parents have insurance, advise the parent to consult with their insurance carrier. In some cases, insurance companies have their own referral/resource list. Tell them to make several calls, share what they feel comfortable sharing over the phone, and go with the one who responds best to their needs. The more involved they are in the selection process, the less responsibility you have for the success or failure of that selection.

Warning. Offer these resources as options parents might want to consider. Be careful not to make official recommendations. Individually none of us has the power to make official district recommendations. These are simply resources you can share with parents to use as they deem appropriate.
